

2021/22 Staff Survey Feedback Report

Survey background and purpose

We are committed to running a staff survey annually and this is our eighth annual survey. In 2020/21 we surveyed staff differently about specific work and wellbeing issues related to the Covid-19 pandemic.

Our surveys help us to regularly monitor engagement levels, benchmark against internal and external comparators and work towards continuous improvement of our people management practices.

The annual staff survey provides a regular, formal opportunity for people to express their views anonymously on a range of working and HR practices over and above other established methods of feedback that are part of our everyday work such as one to ones, team meetings, performance reviews and through working groups and consultations.

The staff survey sits alongside our commitment to maintaining our Investors In People (IIP) status, and the questions asked in the survey have been chosen to mirror those asked through the formal IIP questionnaire process. We also ask some questions on staff engagement related particular areas of our work, culture and environment.

Both our survey and the IIP accreditation process provide us with key information on engagement and satisfaction in the office and we use the feedback to drive continuous improvement and form the basis of an action plan to target areas for improvement.

This report sets out the findings of the 2021/22 survey along with a benchmark against our last survey and publicly available surveys from other relevant organisations.

Setting the scene – Approach and methodology

- As with previous surveys, an online questionnaire approach was used, using the same questions we have asked before in order to be able to benchmark responses.
- There were 11 survey themes consisting of 101 statements on which people are asked to provide their responses.
- Some updates to the survey this year included:
 - 3 new questions under Corporate Social Responsibility to further explore the impact of the work of the Climate Change Community of Practice
 - we kept the questions that we introduced last year on Health and Wellbeing which were reflected in Scottish Government, World Health Organisation and Office for National Statistics surveys
 - we continued to ask the same questions as last year relating to Covid-19 under Internal Relations and Leadership and the section relating to staff experiences of the Covid-19 pandemic and its impact on health, wellbeing, personal circumstances, work relationships and performance
- The majority of statements continued to offer six different rating options based on a Likert scale (strongly agree, agree, neither agree nor disagree, disagree, strongly disagree, not applicable).
- Some questions offered five semantic scale response options (e.g. a scale of excellent to poor, never to always, significantly positive to significantly negative and not applicable options).
- Some questions asked for simple responses (yes/no) or a multiple choice selection.
- As with previous surveys, staff were able to add free text comments under each theme.

Setting the scene – Survey analysis

Like we've done in previous surveys, the nominal cut off has been applied to any scores below 70% positive as areas to consider for improvement. Any scores below 50% positive identify high priority issues. As with previous surveys, these nominal cut off points are setting a high standard for improvements.

Again, in line with our approach to additional comments in previous years, these have been analysed and summarised in order to identify key themes as well as maintain privacy and ensure that comments could not be attributed to specific individuals.

The results have been analysed and presented against the 2020/21 and 2018/19 results to identify significant shifts in scores, in particular for those categories falling below the 70% positive benchmark.

Benchmarking data wasn't collected as part of this year's survey reporting. This was due to capacity to enable us to carry out separate staff surveys as part of our trial of hybrid working arrangements.

Setting the scene – Response rates

- 77% of staff responded to the survey. This includes 66% who fully completed and 10% who partially completed the survey.
- This was less than the response rate for 2020/21 (88%) and 2018/19 (84%).

Response Rate by Team
(Fully and Partially Completed)

Note: The survey was sent to all SPSO staff (including those on parental leave and long term absence) apart from those involved in survey design, analysis and action planning (Leadership Team, HR Manager)

Headline results – Survey Themes

Corporate Social Responsibility	69%	69%	76%
Health and Wellbeing	83%	89%	76%

Note: This table shows the average levels of engagement for each survey theme

- Management was the theme that people were most engaged in this year with an average engagement of 84%.
- Health and wellbeing, internal relations and equal opportunities and diversity also maintained an average score over 80% this year.
- On average, we have scored over 70% positive in all but one area (csr) of the survey this year. This was also the theme that had the highest average of neutral responses which represented 22% of responses.
- The themes learning and development and equal opportunities and diversity improved compared to 2020/21.
- 7 themes scored, on average, lower than in 2020/21 (your job, internal relations, external customers, management, leadership, perceptions of spso and health and wellbeing). There was no more than a 7% drop in scores in these themes.
- There continued to be an improvement on the average scores for 2018/19 in all but 3 themes (external customers, management, csr).
- The average percentage of negative responses didn't exceed 10% in any of the survey themes.

We are encouraged to suggest ways that SPSO could support community causes and/or charities	65%	70%	↓ 5%	89%	↓ 24%

While there were a high number of neutral responses in these questions (ranging between 10-42%), some of these questions scored high in negative responses (23-63%), particularly relating to the questions about feeling connected to colleagues, the strategic direction of the organisation, the amount of work people feel comfortable doing and the people resources at SPSO.

Headline Results – Most improved

Survey Theme	Question	2021/22	Increase since last year	2020/21
Perceptions of SPSO	At the SPSO we have the physical resources we need to complete our work effectively	79%	↑ 13%	66%
Perceptions of SPSO	I feel committed to the SPSO's goals	92%	↑ 11%	81%
Equal Opportunities & Diversity	Access to opportunities for development and support is fairly managed	75%	↑ 11%	64%
Internal Relations	I feel comfortable communicating information to colleagues across the organisation	91%	↑ 11%	80%
Perceptions of SPSO	We challenge behaviours that are not in line with our values	77%	↑ 10%	67%
Internal Relations	I have the technology and equipment I need to be able work remotely	95%	↑ 7%	88%
External Customers	We act on the feedback we receive from external stakeholders	72%	↑ 6%	66%
Management	My line manager behaves consistently with integrity	94%	↑ 5%	89%
Learning & Development	The feedback I receive helps me to improve my performance	85%	↑ 5%	80%
My job	My targets are ambitious but realistic	67%	↑ 5%	62%

We can see that, compared to last year, people feel more engaged in SPSO's approaches to supporting people with physical and technical resources for working, along with opportunities for people to develop being fairly managed. There are also improvements in the commitment that people feel about reaching SPSO's goals, including having targets that are ambitious and realistic and challenging behaviour that doesn't fit with our values. There is a positive increase in people's perceptions around feedback, both externally as well as personally with managers behaving consistently and with integrity.

Compared to last year, the feedback remains broadly similar in terms of positive responses. There has been over a 10% drop in the number of negative responses and under physical health and caring responsibilities, the number of 'no impact' responses increased as a direct result while the 16% drop in negative responses about productivity was because more people rated this positively this year.

Headline Results – Insight from comments

94 comments were made in the survey, 56 fewer than 2020/21 when we also had a higher response rate. Comments were broad and covered a range of topics with the following themes most commented on:

48% workload, resources, capacity

22% teamworking, collaboration

20% management style, approach, support

19% wellbeing and work-life balance

17% performance, standards, targets

14% learning and development

13% communications (technology, style)

Insight from comments

I currently do not have a comfortable level of work... My work has become less interesting in recent months and I have less scope to use my skills and capabilities as I am spending most of my time managing the overwhelming level of ... cases

I think the allocation system needs to be adjusted to take account of complexity...to ensure the allocations are balanced and avoid overwhelming people with high numbers of complex cases.

Long waiting times and a large unallocated pool with no clear plan to tackle this leaves me uncomfortable with the progress/direction of travel of the organisation.

Workload, resources, capacity

If / when fully staffed I think we probably do have the people resources we need. High levels of absence and reduced productivity for some staff has had an impact on our ability to reduce waiting times. I am hopeful this will improve in the coming year.

It is...more challenging to feel our work has any real impact when we are investigating events that occurred approx 3 years ago.

Teamworking, collaboration

Although everyone works hard to stay connected and we have a supportive team, remote working means we miss out on a lot in the way of incidental chat/support from colleagues.

I have been very uncomfortable making and receiving difficult calls from home without the support of colleagues. While I know there are people I can call to debrief, in the moment that is often far less appealing than if you are present with colleagues.

I think communication has definitely improved as we have adjusted to working from home long-term but I do still feel quite disconnected from some areas of the organisation.

In terms of relationships with people I work with, in some ways I think it has been very positive to work with my team in a different way and I think I have got to know people in different ways. I've made connections I didn't have previously. However, my interaction with others across the organisations has been far more limited, so it's a mixed picture.

Insight from comments

Line manager supportive of my health and wellbeing but their ability to take practical action to relieve personal stress/anxiety has been limited due to high case numbers.

The Leadership team have responded to the need to communicate effectively, and the engagement with staff is much better during and post covid than it was pre-covid. However I am concerned that a major risk for the business, and for staff overall, being the ever increasing 'backlog' is not given enough prominence in terms of the impact it has on morale, productivity, sense of job satisfaction

Management style, approach, support

I feel supported and valued by my Manager [they] trusts me to make decisions and be proactive in my role and is always available should I need help or guidance. Good performance is always recognised and appreciated which in turn motivates me to continue doing the very best I can in my role.

I have had a good few managers over my career and I have to say that my current manager is probably the best I have had...is a real asset to the business and makes working in the team I am in a real pleasure.

Wellbeing, work-life balance

When you have a short term illness that ordinarily you would not come into the office with, it is very easy to try and 'push through it' when at home. It's easier to think getting at least one thing done is better than nothing - when in actuality we should just take the time we need to get better, without feeling guilty.

In lockdown, and more generally, I often find that I have too little time to meet the various demands of my role. The result is working for too long without a break, working too many hours and developing back and hip issues from poor quality office chairs, coupled with excessive immobility.

The increased...workload...has had a negative impact on my wellbeing particularly the uncertainty of resourcing to deal with the uptake in demand for our service, and the lack of opportunity or appetite for driving improvement...

I feel less stressed and more productive working from home and would prefer to continue working from home primarily going forward.

Insight from comments

Performance, standards, targets

While my performance is reviewed the quality of my work is not. The lack of QA has been a significant barrier in ensuring the quality of work produced by my team. This has been a risk since we have had new members of the team join, numerous changes to the guidance, and an huge increase in demand for the service which has resulted in a higher volume of work going out in a shorter time scale.

Targets are largely imposed from above, they do little to improve productivity, other than increasing pressure on individual staff members. There is little evidence of analysis of processes or change based on performance across the teams.

Communications style, technology

There are too many communication methods and little clarity, consistency or logic to which is used for what communications

Communication can seem haphazard, and it is often difficult to relate the LT information to the day to day tasks for staff.

I value the regular updates and think LT have engaged with us well during the pandemic, but it doesn't feel as if there is a clear plan at the moment.

Learning and Development

While I do believe there is appetite and encouragement from management to get involved in training opportunities, these often feel unmanageable from a time perspective, and the time involved in undertaking training is not reflected in targets or allocations.

Our training is good/relevant but CRs don't have sufficient time for more comprehensive L&D because of our caseloads.

I am not always clear what learning and development opportunities I can ask for and how closely they need to link to my current role. It would be helpful to know what training/opportunities others in the organisation have requested, so that I can also express interest if it's something I hadn't thought of.

Conclusions

Engagement in the survey decreased by 11% on average compared to the last survey. It is possible that there was a 'survey fatigue' in the organisation last year with the launch of several projects involving surveys to evaluate future direction. 77% is generally a good response rate and we are thankful to those that contribute their views. We hope to improve this response rate next year and encourage as many people as possible to participate.

We saw an improvement in 30% of questions but there was a drop in positive responses in 60% of questions compared to last year. Overall, this drop was due to a slight increase (less than 10%) in the number of negative and neutral responses to other questions this year, compared to last year.

We saw fewer questions scoring between 50-70% this year compared to last year (13% of questions this year compared to 17% last year) and there was a 1% increase in the number of questions scoring below 50% (bringing the overall number of questions scoring below 50% to 4%).

Feedback shows that people are particularly engaged in management style and approaches, internal communications and homeworking infrastructure. These results are particularly encouraging given the ongoing challenges of working during the pandemic last year.

The areas where people are particularly dissatisfied are around work volumes and the challenges of this are not just limited to individual job satisfaction and wellbeing but also the impact it has on people's ability to take up opportunities for csr and I&d. Another theme that flows through the survey is around the challenges of home working, particularly the impact that this has on our work relationships both in terms of socialisation and feeling connected to and identifying as part of the wider organisation (i.e. outwith the team setting).

Areas for improvement

The following questions and themes scored below 70% and are the focus for improvement planning:

External customers	I feel well supported when I am communicating difficult or sensitive issues	69%
Management	Performance is managed in my team	69%
Corporate social responsibility	SPSO contributes to campaigns and projects that promote the wellbeing of society	69%

Improvement planning and next steps

We combine feedback from the staff survey with feedback and recommendations from the IIP reviews which feed into our HR action plan and business planning processes.

Taking account of the feedback shared in this year's survey, we will focus our improvement planning on the following areas:

- ❖ promoting staff survey earlier in the year ahead of the launch to encourage interest and improve response rates;
- ❖ addressing the challenges of work volumes (which impact on morale, health and wellbeing, ability to participate in CSR, L&D activities);
- ❖ maintaining performance standards, particularly as we work in and out of the office environment;
- ❖ clarity in direction and the approach to dealing with the backlog of casework;
- ❖ improving on and maximising the people resources available to us;
- ❖ how we continue to overcome the challenges of home working like keeping people connected, building relationships across the office and overcoming physical barriers of not working together in the same place at the same time;
- ❖ providing more support for communicating difficult and sensitive issues;
- ❖ continuing to identify individual skills development needs through the performance development planning process while also linking to wider team training needs and ensuring workloads allow people to take-up of L&D activities;
- ❖ raising awareness, engagement with and investing more time in our contributions to CSR initiatives to support professional development.

Technical Guidance

Please bear in mind when reading this report:

- Rounding | Results are presented as whole numbers for ease of reading, with rounding performed at the last stage of calculation for maximum accuracy. Therefore, in some instances, the differences presented in this report will not match the rounded figures of the scores being compared. For example, where a figure of 69.64% has been returned in the raw data, in this report it will appear as 70% and this will be identified as an area for improvement.
- Theme scores | Scores for each individual theme are arrived at by calculating the average percentage of positive responses to the theme's constituent questions.
- Comparison to historical results | This year we created 23 questions which were not comparable to previous survey results. For tables that include data for historical survey results, 'N/A' indicates that a comparable question was not included in the survey.
- Percentages | Unless otherwise stated, question score percentages shown in this report relate to the proportion of employees providing a positive response.
- Anonymity | We have maintained anonymity of the feedback by removing any references to individuals and teams due to the small numbers in some teams which could identify individuals.
